

Community Cross-Training Program launches December 4th and 5th

By Southeast Health Group

The public is invited to attend a Community Cross-Training Program in La Junta at Otero Junior College Student Center on December 4th from 5:30 to 7:30, and in Lamar at Lamar Community College Lecture Hall on December 5th from 5:30 to 7:30. Rhonda Robinson, M.Ed., LPC will lead the first event on the subject of childhood trauma and how it impacts rural communities. A light supper will be provided, and door prizes will be awarded.

“We are excited to welcome Rhonda to southeast Colorado to talk about how we can make our children and communities more resilient,” said Laura DiPrince, Chief of Mental Health Operations for Southeast Health Group. “She is a wealth of information and a very engaging speaker and educator.”

Rhonda Robinson, M.Ed., LPC is a Certified Beyond Consequences Trainer and Coach as well as a Licensed Professional Counselor. Rhonda has an expertise in trauma work for over 25 years and “She is a wealth of information and a very engaging speaker and educator”

Rhonda has an understanding, fun, warm personality and an amazing ability to deeply connect with others to provide learning, coaching, counseling, and education.

Southeast Health Group is offering the free workforce development program, which is intended to cross-train primary care, mental health, substance use disorder, social services, law enforcement, early childhood and

Rhonda Robinson to speak on making communities more resilient school personnel to enhance integrated care efforts throughout the rural and frontier region of southeastern Colorado. Concerned citizens and the general public are also invited to attend. The four-part series will address the issues of childhood trauma, school safety, homelessness and the heroin use in our communities.

Funding for this project was provided by the Telligen Community Initiative, a grant making foundation with a mission to initiate and support innovative and forward-looking health-related projects aimed at improving health, social well-being and educational attainment.

Southeast Health Group kindly requests an RSVP to Laura DiPrince (La Junta) or Jackie Brown (Lamar) at 1-800-511-5446 for planning purposes.